I am a docent in sociology and Associate professor (universitetslektor) at the Department of Sociology at Umeå University, Sweden. With a background in engineering physics, I am interested in modelling social phenomena using large-scale datasets and non-traditional quantitative methods. My research is mainly concerned with social cohesion, how societies maintain it and how it is challenged. I address these questions through social network models of organizing processes, particularly applied to the dynamics of criminal organizing and collaboration. I also use trajectory analysis to study neighbourhood segregation dynamics in Sweden.
