Headword

Happy New Year! Welcome back to a Spring semester brimming with teaching, research and admin! As I am writing this, I can see snow flurries outside my window. It looks like we are finally getting that white winter after all. And the light is returning, especially in the afternoon, did you notice?

Paula Uimonen

We are very pleased to welcome two new colleagues: Ivana Macek and Paula Uimonen both appointed as university lecturers from 1st January 2014. We are looking forward to working with you! Unfortunately, Ruben Andersson is leaving the Department, at least for the time being. We have enjoyed your presence and contributions very much. Many thanks for now!

One sad message has reached us at the beginning of the year: an old friend of our Department, Professor Gerald D. Berreman, University of California, Berkeley, passed away just before Christmas, after a long illness. Gerry, as those of us who knew him will always think of him, was a Fulbright Professor in the Department in the autumn semester of 1972, and was awarded an honorary doctorate by Stockholm University at its centennial celebration in 1978. He will be remembered for his contributions to the discipline at many levels. His first monograph, Hindus of the Himalayas (1963) remains a classic, as does Behind Many Masks (1962), a pioneering analytical account of an ethnographic field study, his own doctoral dissertation project. The edited volume Social Inequality: Comparative and Developmental Approaches (1981) shows his enduring commitment to the study of the forms of human inequality, evident already in the early article "Caste in India and the United States" (1960), which points to the parallels between the Indian caste system and racial domination in the southern United States, as it was in the era before desegregation. But Gerry was also an academic activist, not least as a vocal critic of the involvement of anthropology with the United States military, during the Vietnam War and in other ways. As a separate attachment with this Research newsletter you can find his article "Is Anthropology Alive? Social Responsibility in Social Anthropology", published in Current Anthropology in 1968. It is a document from the history of our discipline which still deserves to be read and thought about.

All the best,
Helena

»Chanjo ya Rushwa. An ethnographic road movie«

Paula Uimonen presents her new film, which is based on her recent research on corruption in everyday life in Tanzania (2012-2013). Chanjo ya Rushwa (Vaccination against Corruption) is an ethnographic road movie about a campaign against corruption through music, mobiles and social media. In 2011-2012 Vitali Maembe & The Spirits carried out a music tour in Tanzania to vaccinate the population against corruption. The artists performed in public spaces, to give ordinary citizens a chance to speak up against corruption! This documentary film captures the campaign and the voices of people breaking the culture of silence on corruption. The film builds on anthropological research, which is also published in 'Mediated Agency: Music and Media against Corruption in Tanzania' (Uimonen 2013). The film is available online on YouTube and Vimeo at <http://vimeo.com/paulauimonen>.

»Labor and Precariousness in China's Porcelain Capital«

In recent years, scholars have turned to Bourdieu's model of precariousness to understand workers' experiences under neoliberal capitalism. In this presentation I look at Bourdieu's ideas in relation to China's most famous porcelain production site: the city of Jingdezhen. Bourdieu directs us toward shared the structural features of job insecurity, emphasizing the political consequences of workers' alienation. Yet his universalist model cannot adequately explain how or why workers respond to precarious labor regimes as they do. In Jingdezhen, porcelain workers lost their state and collective sector jobs when the government mandated privatization and marketization. How they understood and responded to this experience was shaped by Jingdezhen's particular history, including the ways that decades of government policies had promoted reliance on personal networks, made labor activism the exclusive purview of the state, and given many Chinese a negative view of mass mobilization.

Maris Gillette is a cultural anthropologist and filmmaker. Currently she is writing a book about ceramic production in China's porcelain capital, from 1004 when Jingdezhen's wares first caught the attention of the imperial court, through centuries of government sponsorship, until the early 21st century turn to private enterprise. Gillette has curated and co-curated exhibitions and installations on Chinese porcelain and other topics at a number of museums and galleries. She has worked on several community-based digital videos in Philadelphia, and made a film about Jingdezhen's porcelain industry entitled Broken Pots Broken Dreams. Gillette has also written extensively about Chinese Muslims (Hui) in Xi'an. She is Professor of Anthropology at Haverford College and EURIAS Fellow at the Swedish Collegium for Advanced Study. In July 2014, she will become the E. Desmond Lee Professor of Museum Studies and Community History at the University of Missouri, St. Louis.

»Zouglou and Belonging in Sarfala: Negotiating Social Displacement in a Diaspora at Home in Bobo-Dioulasso, Burkina Faso«

The past decade's armed conflict in Côte d'Ivoire has been based on a nationalist rhetoric of autochthony and belonging that stigmatises »Burkinabe strangers« as scapegoats for the country's protracted socio-economic hardships. However, the forced »return« to Burkina Faso of first and second generation immigrants was experienced as an ambiguous movement from one state of exclusion to another. Labelled as »diaspos« and »ivoiriens«, their forced displacement from Côte d'Ivoire entailed a social displacement to the margins of social life in the city in Burkina Faso.

This paper reflects on how Ivorian zouglou music was consumed by a group of 'diaspos', intent on performing their otherness and quite successful in exploiting that difference in the competition with non-migrant youths over access to employment and privileges. More specifically, I demonstrate that zouglou music has become a trademark of the self-proclaimed 'diaspos' who deliberately mark themselves off from their Burkinabe neighbours through their clothing, their speech, and their taste in music. In this way, their past mobilities – their parents' labour migration to Côte d'Ivoire and their own forced displacement during the war – evoke a cosmopolitan youth identity that represents the hopes and dreams of many Burkinabe youths; to migrate to the regional metropolis of Abidjan and take part in global flows of urban youth culture, consumption, and privilege.

»Conflicts and identities among the Assyrians in Sweden«

Assyrians or Syriacs have settled in Sweden since the late 1960s. By founding many associations they have been mobilized into, and as a diaspora. The Swedish welfare state has in many ways supported the formation of the many and often competing organizations and it is possible to regard the Assyrians/Syriac in Sweden, not as one diaspora but at least as two. Diasporic activities have been channelled into associations devoted to political, cultural, religious and sport activities. But the successful gathering of Assyrians and Syriacs in the Swedish diaspora also poses dilemmas. There are vital, difficult and often painful debates among the Assyrians/Syriacs about how individuals and the group as a whole should relate to Sweden, to each other in the diaspora and to the homelands.

This presentation is based on a research project focusing on Assyrians in Sweden and their transnational commitments. The development of diaspora formation in Sweden including the development of competing organizations will be traced. The conflicts and splits are often lamented by ordinary people. But instead the often fierce conflicts over ethnic identity and over historiography may have contributed to the development of a diasporic consciousness. In the presentation the replenishment of Assyrians through political conflicts and wars in the countries of origin will also be discussed, as well as the many efforts to simultaneously live in the diaspora and be transnationally committed.

NB The seminar will be held in Swedish.

Workshop: »Transnational migration and global work«

Deadline: January 25

The workshop is held in cooperation between the partner universities Stockholm University, University of Helsinki and the National University of Singapore.

Theme of the workshop

In times of globalization, activities of work are also becoming more global in nature and in particular they involve transnational migration flows. Nation states and international organisations, such as the EU, are examples of emerging global migration regimes, trying to monitor global work. The increasing mobility of people, who wish to improve their life situations, is another indication of the significance of global work. Recruitment agencies are brokering migrant workers, students are entering international universities and transnational firms are acting within global value chains. Some migrant workers enter the high end of the economy and are sometimes referred to as highly-skilled or career migrants, whereas others enter the low end of the economy, often suffering from exploitation and low earnings. The extensive student migration from India to the ICT firms in the US, South-Asian women doing domestic work in Singapore and Thai berry pickers in Sweden are all examples of global work – gendered and characterized by class and ethnic hierarchies in an evermore globalized labour market.

This workshop emphasizes how various forms of global work are closely linked to transnational migration processes. Webs of networks tie countries together, constituting a transnational social space, facilitating migration flows. The everyday practices of individual migrants are affected by these networks – and the simultaneous events taking place in the sending and receiving countries – and at the same time contribute to their continuation. There are hence many examples of how transnational migration processes and global work practices are interlinked: in globalized economies institutions develop global networks within which workers are recruited. These institutions can be transnational firms, global brokers or a network of families and friends. In the receiving society, transnational networks are often used in the labour market and transnational migrant entrepreneurs can use their contacts in their homeland to establish their business in the new country.

The workshop is divided into two major strands

- A. Migrant practices and everyday life

In this part of the workshop focus is on the transnational activities of migrant workers and/or international students in the global labour markets. We are for example interested in the everyday life of the migrant in the homeland and/or in the receiving countries, the temporary or permanent migrant, who may or may not be embedded in an existing structure of social network (e.g. diaspora) and gender relations and effects on the household and how they relate to 'global work'.

- B. Structural conditions: policies, organizations and brokers

The second strand of the workshop focuses on the structural level of transnational migration processes and its relation to global work, such as the political agendas or migration regimes of nation states, the activities of migrant organisations, the agendas of transnational firms or the mediating role of recruitment agencies.

Call for papers

We welcome scholars with an interest in transnational migration and global work to contribute to the workshop within these two strands. Please send your abstract no later than January 25, 2014, and your paper no later than February 20, 2014, to: Charlotta Hedberg (charlotta.hedberg@humangeo.su.se). The abstract should not exceed 400 words and the paper should be between 4000 and 7000 words (including references).

13th EASA Biennial Conference
Collaboration, Intimacy & Revolution - innovation and continuity in an interconnected world
31st July - 3rd August, 2014, Estonian Institute of Humanities, Tallinn University, Estonia
Deadline: February 27

All proposals must be made to specific panels via the 'Propose a paper' link found beneath the panel abstract on that panel's webpage. Proposals should consist of:

- a paper title
- authors/co-authors
- a short abstract of fewer than 300 characters
- a long abstract of fewer than 250 words.

On submission of the proposal, the proposing author (but not the co-authors) will receive an automated email confirming receipt. If you do not receive this email, please first check the Login environment - Cocoa (see toolbar above right) to see if your proposal is there. If it is, it simply means your confirmation email got spammed/lost; if it is not, you will need to re-submit, as for some reason the process was not completed. Subsequent communication will be with all authors of a paper.

Proposals will be marked as pending until the end of the Call for papers (27/02/2014). Convenors will then be asked to make their decisions over the papers proposed to their panel by 9th March and to communicate those to the proposers, marking them up within the login environment (Cocoa). Papers which are neither accepted nor rejected, but marked for 'transfer', will then be considered by the Scientific Committee to see where else they might fit in the conference programme. There is no guarantee that such papers can be re-housed. We aim to resolve all transfers by 10th April 2014.

While we cannot prevent you from making multiple proposals, we would encourage colleagues to make just one. The 'transfer process' aims to ensure that good papers will have a chance to be presented even if the panel to which they were initially proposed has no space.

The rules

- Delegates may only make one presentation. In addition to that they may also convene one plenary session, panel, or roundtable; and/or be discussant in one plenary session, panel, or roundtable.
- All convenors and presenters must be members of EASA (during 2014), and have paid their subscription before the conference.
- But to propose a paper you do not need to be a member of EASA, and any decision taken about your proposal is not influenced by whether or not you currently are a member. If your paper is accepted you will need to become a member for 2014, via the online application form. Please do not apply until your paper has been accepted. Once you have applied we will contact your referees and then confirm your membership. This can take some time, so please be patient.

Language

EASA has two official languages, French and English. It is up to each panel's convenors to decide which languages will be used in that panel. Some convenors may be happy to accept presentations in the other language; to determine this you will have to email the convenors and ask. In such cases we would expect authors/presenters to bring a printed summary of their presentation in the primary language (EN or FR) for distribution within the workshop. Papers may not be presented in a third language.

Prisma – en ny portal som gör det lättare att söka forskningsmedel

Vetenskapsrådet, Formas (Forskningsrådet för miljö, areella näringar och samhällsbyggnad) och Forte (Forskningsrådet för hälsa, arbetsliv och välfärd) håller på att bygga upp ett nytt ansökningssystem för att forskare runt om i Sverige ska kunna söka forskningsmedel hos dessa tre forskningsråd elektroniskt via en och samma ansökningsportal. Varje enskild forskare kommer att kunna fylla i och samla in alla uppgifter för sina ansökningar till de tre forskningsråden på en enda central plats. Dessutom kommer forskarna att kunna föra in sina CV:n i portalen och hämta in publikationer. De tre forskningsrådens målsättning är att under 2014 först publicera mindre utlysningar i systemet för att sedan publicera de stora utlysningarna för 2015.

Vad är nyttan med Prisma? Prisma kommer att underlätta för den sökande att följa vad som händer med ansökan, få en överblick över varifrån forskningsmedel söks, ansöka om förlängning av dispositionstider, hämta in sitt CV och koppla till ansökan. En CV-tjänst kommer även att kopplas till ansökningsportalen. Det kommer också att vara möjligt att låsa upp en ansökan och ändra i den fram till deadline. För universitetet kommer det att det bli enklare att göra ekonomiska återraporteringar och utvärderingar av olika slag.

Vad händer härnäst? Ytterligare finansiärer har beslutat att ansluta sig till ansökningssystemet Prisma; först Energimyndigheten, Naturvårdsverket och Vinnova, men även andra finansiärer har signalerat att de överväger anslutning framöver.

Vetenskapsrådet, Formas och Forte kommer i god tid innan aktuella utlysningar att informera om hur man som forskare använder sig av ansökningsportalen Prisma.

Avdelningen för Forskningservice har samordningsansvar för införande av Prisma vid Stockholms universitet.

Horizon 2020 viktigt för humsamforskare

Horizon 2020 är det första riktiga breda programmet för europeiska humanister och samhällsvetare och en alldeles för stor och viktig möjlighet för att bara förbigås, skriver Mats Benner professor i forskningspolitik vid Lunds universitet i en krönikा på RJs webb.

Kunskap får nämligen inte bara bli liktydig med teknik och medicin. Det europeiska samarbetet måste utmanas av forskare som konfronterar EU:s verkliga ödesfrågor. De områdena finns nu med i Horizon 2020.

RJ inför begränsningar i möjligheterna att söka projektanslag

RJ:s styrelse har beslutat införa två begränsningar när det gäller möjligheten att söka forskningsmedel inom stödformen Projekt. Dessa begränsningar påverkar inte någon annan stödform. Forskare kan exempelvis finnas med i programansökningar utan att påverkas av begränsningar inom stödformen Projekt.

De båda begränsningarna innebär följande:

- Från och med 2014 (då den 29 januari kl. 16.00 är sluttiden) är det endast möjligt att ingå i en (1) ansökan om projekt. Detta gäller både projektledare och som projektdeltagare. En forskare får maximalt söka medel till en anställning under 3 år med en omfattning av 75 procent. Alla sökande bör i förväg noga överväga vilken forskningsidé som är deras bästa och att satsa på den.
- Från och med ansökningarna 2015 får de projektledare och projektdeltagare som fått avslag i första omgången två år i följd inte söka anslag nästkommande år. Begränsningen av möjligheten att söka projektmedel gäller under ett år. Beslutet får effekt från 2015, då den som fått avslag 2013 och 2014 inte kommer att kunna söka.

Sannolikt kommer några forskare att avstå från att söka 2014 och i stället arbeta vidare med sin ansökan när de vet att de riskerar att inte kunna söka under följande år. Det är dock svårt att veta exakt vilka effekter begränsningen kommer att få. Om vi utgår från antalet ansökningar och avslag under 2011, 2012 och 2013 kommer den bedömningsvis att minska antalet ansökningar med mellan 15 och 25 procent. Begränsningen gäller således både att vara huvudsökande och att ingå i en projektansökan, det vill säga såväl projektledare som projektdeltagare. De forskare som omfattas av begränsningen får besked om att de inte får söka projekt.

Allt färre studenter på fristående kurser

Trots att allt färre börjar studera på högskolan ökar ändå antalet nybörjare på programutbildningar, enligt en analys från Universitetskanslerämbetet. Det är framför allt fristående kurser som tappar studenter. Det är tydligt att universitet och högskolorna prioriterar sina programutbildningar när de har minskat på antalet platser för att anpassa sig efter förändrade ekonomiska förutsättningar.

Postdoc Position at the Department of Anthropology University of Copenhagen Deadline: January 15

CoNeXT (Copenhagen University Neutron and X-ray Techniques, see <http://conext.ku.dk/>) is a University of Copenhagen interfaculty collaborative project. The project is supported for the period 2013-2016 by 27.9 mio DKK by UCPH2016 programme of Excellence.

Applications for a position as postdoctoral research fellow (postdoc) under the auspices of CoNeXT, and located in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Copenhagen are hereby called for.

The cross disciplinary CoNeXT project is concerned with the use of neutron and X-ray synchrotron research infrastructures, such as the ones under construction in Lund, Sweden and operational in Grenoble, France. The anthropological project under CoNeXT follows and ethnographically documents social interaction between scientific, commercial and public governance stakeholders, ranging from regional to supranational levels. The resulting data on communities of practice and the cultural enactment of social networks in highly complex organizational fields will contribute to further theoretical development within the anthropology of organization and management. The study will contribute to further developing the anthropological analysis of contemporary formations of knowledge-labour.

The postdoc project includes extended ethnographic fieldwork at specific organizational locations in Europe, partly in collaboration with an anthropological research team at Department of Anthropology. Research will focus on the daily and institutional interaction between stakeholders representing different interests in relation to large scientific infrastructures, located predominantly in Sweden and France. It will strive to ethnographically document interfaces between scientific communities, organizations representing public and regional interests, and companies with potential interests in drawing innovative capacity from the research structures. Research may include documentation of concrete policies and innovation projects, using a mix of archival and qualitative, ethnographic methods. Candidates will be expected to form part of the CoNeXT interfaculty collaborative project as well as with its associated anthropological research nucleus at Department of Anthropology, and within this framework will be encouraged to continue their own line of research.

Postdoctoral positions require qualifications at PhD level in social or cultural anthropology or other disciplines with documented equivalent expertise in qualitative socio-cultural studies and documented experience with ethnographic fieldwork. Applicants with degrees, or documented interests in the field of BOA - Business and Organisational Anthropology are particularly encouraged to apply. Previous experience with research communities within the natural sciences may be an advantage, but is no requirement.

Research Associate

CRASSH (The Centre for Research in the Arts, Social Sciences and Humanities), University of Cambridge

Deadline: January 23

CRASSH (The Centre for Research in the Arts, Social Sciences and Humanities), with funding provided by the European Research Council, is sponsoring a project entitled Visual Representations of the Third Plague Pandemic. Led by Dr Christos Lynteris (PI), the project will run from 1 October 2013 to 30 September 2018. The project team will consist of three postdoctoral research associates who will work independently and in collaboration with each other and the director of the project. Each of the three posts will be held for 4 years, starting 1 May 2014 to 30 April 2018.

The post available is:

Africa: key areas South Africa, Senegal, Egypt, Madagascar; secondary areas: Nigeria, Tunisia

Applications are encouraged with regard to historical, anthropological and cultural studies of Africa. Applicants who can demonstrate experience of historical or anthropological research on medical issues or visual culture in Africa are particularly encouraged to apply.

The project will collect and analyse primarily photographs as well as other visual documents of the third plague pandemic, which broke out in 1855 in Southwest China and raged across the globe until 1959, causing the death of approximately 12 million people. The aim of the project is to engage in a historical and anthropological analysis of this unprecedented global network of epidemiological photography, underlining its role in the negotiation of geopolitical, colonial and biopolitical relations at the turn of the twentieth century. While investigating the visual record of plague in their respective regions, researchers will engage in a collaborative and interdisciplinary analysis of the entangled history of the visual representation of the third plague pandemic, taking as a common analytical ground four different but vitally interlinked aspects of the visual representation of the pandemic: a) the built environment; b) civil disturbance and public order; c) death, corpses and burial; d) race, class and discrimination.

The postdoctoral research associate will cover the regional cluster of Africa, in areas afflicted by the third plague pandemic. The research associate will be expected to conduct research on the visual representations of the third plague pandemic in Africa through an examination of relevant published and archival sources. The research associate is expected to participate in weekly work-in-progress seminars relating to the project and to provide the PI with regular work reports.

Teaching Visuals - The Pedagogy of Digital & Visual Anthropology

April 10, Stockholm University

Deadline: February 1

The Nordic Network for Digital Visuality (NNDV) invites interested faculty and graduate students to a one-day workshop in Stockholm on April 10.

Drawing on the established research traditions within visual anthropology, this workshop will focus on the pedagogy of deploying visual and digital media in fieldwork across a range of disciplines, including anthropology, sociology and media and cultural studies.

Teachers and Ph.D. students in the social sciences and media and culture studies with an interest in teaching applied visual and digital media are invited to participate.

Visual and digital media are gradually making their way into a number of Nordic social sciences programs. The courses range from the theoretical analysis of visual and digital media to practical, hands-on courses in deploying visual and digital media – film, photography, 2.0 WebDoc/iDoc – in fieldwork, research and communication. The goal of this workshop is to share teaching experiences, to analyse outcomes, and to develop new forms and formats for teaching the use of visual and digital media in fieldwork.

During the first part of the workshop, four teachers of visual and digital anthropology will introduce us to their pedagogical experiences of engaging students practically with visual and digital media, presenting results and work-in-progress and discussing the mutual prospects of their practical pedagogical work. During the second half of the workshop, 3-4 workshop participants will present an idea, a project or a visual/digital course, proposing to make them the object of collaborative discussions and further elaboration.

The workshop will provide rich possibilities for discussing visual and digital teaching forms and formats, and will furthermore be a privileged venue for setting up joint courses and collaborative ventures. The workshop is being held in conjunction with the conference “Beyond the Frame: The Future of the Visual in an Age of Digital Diversity”, April 7-9, at Saltsjöbaden, Stockholm.

To attend the workshop, you are invited to send a letter of motivation, including a brief description of a teaching project you might wish to put up for discussion. A selection will be made of 3-4 projects for the afternoon session. There is no charge to attend the workshop, but registration is binding. Send your motivation and proposal to Perle Møhl no later than 1 February 2014. (perle.mohl@anthro.ku.dk)

Speakers:

- Mark Westmoreland, Stockholm University
- Paula Uimonen, Stockholm University
- Perle Møhl, University of Copenhagen
- Trond Waage, University of Tromsø

Ny utlysning av Flexit-anställningar

Anställningar för disputerade humanister och samhällsvetare
Sista ansökningsdag: 26 februari

RJ utlyser 4 Flexit-anställningar, det vill säga 4 anställningar som in-houseforskare vid 4 olika företag/organisationer. Flexit är ett projekt som söker nya flexibla lösningar för att sprida forskning och forskare utanför universitet och högskolor. Dess huvudsyften är att:

- Bygga broar mellan humanistisk och samhällsvetenskaplig forskning och företag och organisationer utanför universitetsvälden.
- Underlätta kunskapsutbyte och stimulera kontakter så att fler organisationer utanför universitetsvälden kan se och nyttja kompetensen hos disputerade humanister och samhällsvetare, och vice versa.

Vi hoppas också genom programmet kunna visa alternativa karriärmöjligheter för forskare inom humaniora och samhällsvetenskap. Långsiktigt vill RJ genom Flexit-satsningen påverka meriteringssystemet så att akademien i högre grad värderar erfarenheter från företagsvälden, och tvärtom.

Erfarenheterna hittills har varit mycket goda både för företag/organisationer och forskare. I den nya versionen av Flexit hoppas vi djupare involvera akademien i programmet och brobyggandet. Efter en utvärdering av pilotprojektet Flexit öppnar RJ nu programmet även för seniora forskare och delar upp anställningen så att forskaren är anställd två år på ett företag/organisation och sedan ett år på ett lärosäte. Det innebär att man som sökande behöver etablera en affiliering till en akade-

Revisiting 'doing gender': Language and gender in interaction

May 6-8, 2014, University of Karlstad, Sweden

Deadline: March 7, 2014

Teachers:

- Don Kulick, Professor of Anthropology, University of Chicago, USA
- Ann-Carita Evaldsson, Professor of Education, Uppsala University, Sweden
- Erica Sandlund, Senior lecturer, English Linguistics/affiliated researcher, Center for Gender Studies, Karlstad University, Sweden

Course description:

This course centers on exploring key aspects of the relationships between language, gender, and social interaction. Current and earlier debates in the area of language, gender and interaction are revisited with a focus both on the commonalities and differences between different approaches. Providing methodological discussions and illustrative examples on how researchers go about collecting and analyzing data, the overarching focus of the course is how gender issues and other forms of inequalities have been addressed in recent discourse research. We will pay particular attention to research on language and sexuality, enactments of differences, and on interactional accomplishments of gender in various settings. A core idea behind the research examined is the ethnomethodological concept of 'doing gender' that had been present in some form since mid-seventies and firmly established during the 1990s.

The course will, firstly, investigate the relationship between language and gender, both theoretically and empirically. Secondly, the course encompasses research using an ethnomethodological and conversation analytic approach in the study of identity and interaction. The course is aimed at doctoral students in gender studies and related fields, suitable for anyone with an interest in how gender is 'done' in language and embodied action.

Förändring i feministisk teori och empiri
Genusakademins forskarskola, Stockholms universitet
Sista anmälndag: 11 mars

Genusakademins forskarskola vid Stockholms universitet ger våren 2014 en ny kurs på temat förändring. Vad menas med förändring i ett feministiskt perspektiv? Vad är det som skall förändras, och hur kan vi veta att något har förändrats? Diskussioner av kropp, familj och känslor varvas med analyser av kunskapsproduktion, ekonomi och stat/offentlig politik. Sista anmälndag är 11 mars 2014.

Feministisk teori bygger på en mängd föreställningar och idéer om förändring. Även om förändringstemat inte är explcit, finns det alltid närvarande, teoretiskt såväl som politiskt. På en grundläggande nivå är det en fråga om ontologi, idén om könen som sociala konstruktioner, föränderliga över tid och mellan skilda sociala och politiska kontexter. Men det handlar också om en normativ grundtanke - en vilja till förändring av ojämlika könsrelationer och begränsande könsidentiteter.

Syftet med kursen är att undersöka: Vad menas med förändring i ett feministiskt perspektiv? Vad är det som skall förändras, och hur kan vi veta att något har förändrats? Hur ska vi förstå stabilitet? Hur framstår frågan om förändring utifrån olika feministiska teoretiska perspektiv?

Dessa frågor hanteras i relation till olika teman och problem som varit och är centrala i den samtida genusteoretiska forskningen. Tanken är fångas in olika nivåer där analys av förändring och stabilitet kan göras. Så rör sig kursen från diskussioner av kropp, familj och känslor till analyser av kunskapsproduktion, ekonomi och stat/offentlig politik, såväl nationellt som globalt.

NORA – Nordic Journal of Feminist and Gender Research seeks submissions for a special issue slated for publication in autumn 2014
Deadline: April 1, 2014

Gender equality, nationalism and welfare: Intersectional contestations and the politics of belonging
Editors: Birte Siim & Pauline Stoltz

Support for both the welfare state and gender equality is seen as important for the politics of belonging (Yuval-Davis 2011) in a number of Western societies. At the same time, contemporary nationalist and populist parties (e.g. in the different Nordic countries) have formulated welfare and gender-equality policies that have been criticized by many observers. The assumption of these parties is that all natives are already gender equal, whereas migrants from non-Western countries are accused of oppressive behaviour in terms of such categories as gender and sexuality.

Consequently, we would like to encourage papers that focus on theoretical and analytical questions about understandings and conceptualizations of equality, nationalism and welfare. This could be in the context of one or several of the Nordic countries, but theoretically and analytically informed submissions might also address other geographical contexts.

Whereas an inter-categorical approach to intersectionality focuses on the way in which the intersection of social categories, such as gender, 'race', class, religion and sexuality affects particular social behaviour or the distribution of resources, intra-categorical studies problematize the significance and boundaries of the categories themselves. We welcome papers addressing both these approaches, not least in combination with each other.

Suggested areas for submissions include:

- Marginalized sexuality and nationalism
- Political and media representations of sexual violence
- Activism of ethnic minorities
- Democracy, multiple (in)equalities and contemporary political transformations
- Re-framings of gender-equality discourses
- Discrimination and equality
- The future of equality politics

Fejos Postdoctoral Fellowship in Ethnographic Film
Deadline: May 1

Fejos Postdoctoral Fellowships in Ethnographic Film support the completion of ethnographic film/s based on anthropological research already accomplished by the applicant. Fellowships are awarded to scholars in the earlier stages of their careers, when they frequently lack the time and resources to develop their research in the form of ethnographic film. Scholars who have received a Ph.D. or equivalent within ten years of the application deadline are eligible to apply. A maximum of two Fejos Fellowships are awarded annually.

By providing funds for scholars to devote themselves to full-time work on a research-related film, the Foundation aims to enable a new generation of scholars to present their work via this medium. Broadly speaking, we seek to support projects that will have an impact on the field of anthropology -- as well as outreach beyond the academy -- through the support of exciting new and innovative work in the field of ethnographic film.

The fellowship is named after Paul Fejos, who was an early ethnographic film maker (1935-1941) and the first director of the Wenner-Gren Foundation (1941-1963). He was an innovator in his time and in honor of Fejos' legacy, we encourage innovation in film making in terms of process, formal approaches, and the integration of film/video with other forms relevant to visual anthropology (e.g. social media, web-based platforms, 20 crowd-sourced production, and other media platforms that offer new ways of developing outreach to diverse communities). Because »innovation« is more than simply the way things look on screen or the use of social media, the Fejos Fellowship encourages new approaches to the ethics of representing diverse social worlds through a public form, and to rights to materials and copyright.

There is no preference in this fellowship for any particular underlying research methodology, research location or subfield. The main requirements are that the proposed film is firmly rooted in the applicant's completed research, is innovative in approach, and has the potential for a broad impact both within and beyond the discipline.

Fejos Postdoctoral Fellowships are nonrenewable, and provide US $40,000 of financial support for twelve months of continuous full-time work on the project. Applicants requesting shorter time periods will receive a pro-rated award as appropriate (e.g., a six-month project would be awarded $20,000). It is Foundation policy that Institutional Overhead or Institutional Support is not covered under this fellowship. Applicants can apply regardless of institutional affiliation, country of residence, or nationality.

Forerunners of the Forerunners: Swedish Cohabiting Parents, 1968–2007

Sweden has been described as a “family forerunner” in demographic change. Sweden was the first country to experience delayed marriage. Starting in 1970, Swedish women’s mean age at marriage rapidly exceeded that of any other western country and until 1990 (when Denmark caught up) remained at least a year higher than other Nordic countries and two years higher than countries of western Europe. Delayed marriage was due to Sweden’s early leading position in cohabitation, and a dramatic increase in nonmarital births, almost all of which occurred to cohabiting couples. This paper investigates the educational and regional sources of the initial increase in cohabiting births and the stable high levels at more than 50 percent of all births. Analyses are based on Swedish register data with new measures of cohabiting births from 1960 to 2007.

This paper finds significant private returns from trust. Individuals with high trust earn more. Greater trust leads to more income from earnings and self-employment, increases labor supply, reduces time unemployed and retired, and increases human capital.

Second generation immigrants in a broad set of European countries with ancestry from across the world are examined. Individuals are studied within country of birth using variation in inherited trust across ancestral countries.

The approach provides a clear direction of causality from trust to economic success, as outcomes of second generation immigrants do not determine average trust in the ancestral countries. The positive relationship between trust and income is remarkably robust to alternative ancestral influences.

The findings on private returns provide new evidence for mechanisms through which trust creates growth beyond its social return. The results suggest a constructive role for policy to build trust as means to individual success and economic integration.

Välkommen till den svenska lanseringen av Horisont 2020 Vinnova, 29 januari, Clarion Hotel Sign, Östra Järnvägsgatan Anmälan senast 22 januari

Den 1 januari 2014 sjösätter EU-kommissionen en historiskt omfattande satsning på forskning och innovation – Horisont 2020. Mitt under den djupa ekonomiska krisen har medlemsländerna enats om att gemensamt lägga cirka 80 miljarder euro i det nya programmet. Det finns en stark övertygelse om att forskning och innovation kan bidra till att lösa de problem och utmaningar som Europa och världen står inför. Men hur tänker man sig att Horisont 2020 ska medverka till det och vad betyder det för Sverige?

Konferensen inleds av EU:s kommissionär för forskning och innovation, Máire Geoghegan-Quinn. Sveriges perspektiv på Horisont 2020 presenteras av utbildningsminister Jan Björklund och statssekreterare Håkan Ekengren. Några spännande exempel med utgångspunkt i EU-projekt från akademien och industrien presenteras också.

- Hur kommer det framtida europeiska forsknings- och innovationslandskapet se ut?
- Vad innebär Horisont 2020 för svensk forskning och innovation 2014-2020?

Det är några av de frågeställningar som kommer att diskuteras under lanseringsmötet för Horisont 2020 och både internationella samt svenska talare ger sina perspektiv på framtiden. Fokus för presentationerna från EU-kommissionen kommer att vara på de nya delarna som introduceras i Horisont 2020 och hur ramprogrammet kommer att utvecklas.

Kom och lyssna på intressanta talare som (programmet uppdateras kontinuerligt på VINNOVAs hemsida):

Public Lecture within the series »Violent conflicts over land in contemporary Africa«

January 22, 15.15-17.00, Lecture room, NAI's premises, Villavägen 6, Uppsala

»Reclaiming the city: land conflict dynamics in post-war Hargeisa«

Associate Professor Tobias Hagmann

This lecture considers Hargeisa's post-war trajectory through the twin prisms of property and citizenship. The capital of the self-declared Republic of Somaliland has been the site of dramatic shifts in urban property relations over the past two decades. Following northern Somalia's liberation by the Issaq-dominated Somali National Movement (SNM) in 1991 and the gradual pacification of the city in the mid-1990s, Hargeisa evolved into a bustling political center and economic hub. Rapid urbanization, the destruction of cadastral archives, and changing power relations impact on the ways in which established residents and newcomers to the city have (re-)claimed land. In the case of Hargeisa, urban space has been transformed through a broad array of dynamics including forced displacement, property reconstitutions, land commoditization and, more recently, land planning. Of particular interest in all these processes are the overlapping roles of customary and state authorities in adjudicating land disputes and allocation land plots. The lecture demonstrates how evolving land and conflict management practices in postwar Hargeisa are closely intertwined with the co-production of public authority by state and non-state actors.

Tobias Hagmann (PhD) is Associate Professor and researcher in the Department of Society and Globalization, Roskilde University and a fellow at the Rift Valley Institute in London/Nairobi as well as associated researcher with the Political Geography group, University of Zürich. His research is on natural resource management and the causes and consequences of violent conflict, and his regional expertise is on the Horn of Africa, in particular Ethiopia and Somaliland.

Pre-registration is required two days before the lecture. Kindly email your pre-registration to: inga-britt.faris@nai.uu.se On the subject line, please write 'pre-registration'.

Conferences at SU and beyond

Beyond the Frame: The Future of the Visual in an Age of Digital Diversity

April 7-9, Saltsjöbaden, Stockholm
Deadline: January 15

The Nordic Network for Digital Visuality is issuing a call for papers to its final conference, Beyond the Frame: The Future of the Visual in an Age of Digital Diversity.

It has been argued that the move from studying visual culture to its digital manifestations demands that we think beyond the frame of the image – theoretically, methodologically and epistemologically. Yet “seeing” and its material expressions (as photographs, films, etc.) have never been isolated from other senses and expressive forms. The frame is never arbitrary, but a construction that must be interrogated parallel with our examination of what it appears to “contain”. The demand to think beyond the image itself can provide a useful reminder of the limitations that the frame places on our abilities to explore fully the meanings of the visual. How can we make the frame more “permeable” at the same time that we keep in mind its power in organizing how people think and see?

This is particularly important when our research engages with ways of seeing that are not familiar to us. In today’s diverse media landscape, digital media interact with the visual in a range of constellations that are distributed quite differently across the globe, but also in places traditionally considered ‘local’. Our ongoing encounter with visual practices and forms of expression that lie outside of our own cultural “frame” is a challenge for the future of research into the diverse meanings of the visual and its digital manifestations.

We invite papers that address these challenges, particularly in research where we find people expanding their own concepts of the visual, within new media landscapes, particularly in diverse digital forms. We are also interested in papers that address people’s attempts to retain familiar or traditional ways of seeing, including established forms of visual documentation and expression, in the face of technological, social and cultural change. Note that the focus may be either on researchers as they encounter these issues, or on individuals and groups who are being studied. Also welcome are papers that report on comparative studies of how these challenges are being met by different researchers and/or their subjects in different research settings.

Confirmed keynote speakers

- Scott McQuire, School of Culture and Communication, University of Melbourne. Co-founder of the Spatial Aesthetic research cluster, McQuire’s research explores the social effects of media technologies with a particular focus on urban space.
- Gillian Rose, Open University, London. Rose works broadly in the field of visual culture, focusing on visuality as a practice carried out by human subjects in collaboration with different objects and technologies.

The conference will include approximately 35 participants, and is being planned thematically organized paper sessions, and will conclude with a round-table discussion of the conference theme.

We invite doctoral students and other researchers who are doing research on this theme to apply in one of two ways:

- Submit an abstract (max 500 words) for a paper, no later than January 15, 2014. A small selection of papers will be made that address the conference themes in interesting ways, and in addition further appear to be in dialogue with each other. Note that if your abstract is selected, we are expecting you to participate in the entire conference.
- If you are interested in attending the conference without giving a paper, please write a brief motivation (max 300 words) stating your reasons for wanting to attend, and the specific ways you wish to engage with the conference theme in your own work. We will use these statements to select people who appear to offer interesting perspectives as active discussants during the two days.

Clearly indicate which option you are choosing and send your application to karin.becker@ims.su.se no later than Jan 15. Include NNDV Beyond the Frame, as the subject of your email, and also your position and institutional affiliation.

The Fiscal State and Social Citizenship II: Theorizing tax avoidance from socio-cultural perspectives

Deadline: January 15, 2014

We call for abstracts to the second workshop on The Fiscal State and Social Citizenship taking place March 13-14, 2014 in Linköping. Our aim is to continue the fruitful discussion initiated in the first workshop in spring 2013 at Umeå University and the diverse research routes there laid out. In this second workshop we broaden the focus to include theorizing tax avoidance from socio-cultural perspectives. For inspiration we have two key note speakers that have contributed widely to establish the field internationally:

- Bill Maurer, Professor of Anthropology, UC Irvine
- Lynne Oats, Professor of Taxation and Accounting, University of Exeter

Another inspiration will be a panel discussion on tax avoidance with participants offering diverse theoretical views and angles: Steven Sampson, Professor in Anthropology, Lund University and Hans Sjögren, Professor of Economic History, Linköping University are already confirmed and in addition there will be a representative from the Swedish Tax Agency and a legal scholar. Moderator Åsa Gunnarsson.

In this call for abstracts we invite scholars, practitioners and activists interested in the issue of taxation, tax avoidance and their socio-cultural impact. Please send an abstract of max. 300 words to FC-2014@liu.se no later than January 15, 2014.

Taxes do not only provide economic funding for infrastructure, welfare, and defense but its mere existence raises seemingly eternal political and moral questions in society. Fiscal issues are as topical as they ever were, yet so utterly differently debated in diverse countries.

The Nordic countries provide in this perspective an interesting field for study. The taxes are by international comparison high and so is tax payers' compliance. The Nordic tax collecting agencies work actively to enhance compliance and do not only perform their fiscal duties, but aim to convey a role in society that is more encompassing with a moral message. This can be exemplified with their mottos and mission on each website.

VERO, the Finnish tax agency has a collective aim that "the Finnish welfare is created hand in hand", in Denmark SKAT states that they "secure a just and efficient financing of our future public sector", the Norwegian Skatteeaten has the goal "to secure the welfare states funding". The Swedish Tax Agency boldly emphasises that "our vision is a society where everybody wants to do the right thing" or perhaps more specifically "do one's fair share. Their quest for minimizing tax faults is very important for the Tax Agencies legitimacy in each society.

In contrast to these governmental fiscal endeavors, there are many examples of people, corporations, organizations and also municipalities that minimize, avoid and evade paying taxes. These strategies and practices and their impact on society in diverse empirical contexts is the subject for this workshop. Corporations are invariably profit-seeking, and thereby aim to minimize costs. Still, businesses apply many different strategies in regards to taxes: from law-abiding planning to the more ethically questionable deferral schemes involving so-called tax paradises. People also apply various means and morals towards their tax paying strategies. Incomes taxes are for the employed difficult to avoid, but there are various ways to avoid consumption taxes such as buying work off the books, deduct costs of various sorts, and even involvement in straight out economic crimes. By analyzing the actors' strategies and practices that violate the governmental agendas, we welcome contributions that shed light on the relationships between cultural aspects, economic institutions, and political responsibility.

Examples of research questions

- Who occupy this void beyond the moral and 'right' tax paying entities? What implications do the creation, interpretation, and practices of tax laws have on everyday life? What effects does tax evasion have on behavioral patterns, social relations, normative standards and institutional framework?
- Are there circumstances when tax avoidance is made licit? If so, who make them licit? What strategies do exist; both to avoid taxes and to stop the avoidance, and what impact do they have? Does perceived taxpayer behavior affect cultural attitudes toward tax-evasion? Do these values differ between nations as well as between social groups, or between urban and rural areas, and why is this the case? What values make citizens comply with in order to avoid paying diverse type of taxes?
- How does lobbying and remittance institutions impact the creation of new tax laws? As an overall question - what is the impact of tax cheating on democracy and sovereignty?

The Sixth Annual ISHTIP Workshop 2014

The Instability of Intellectual Property

July 2-4, 2014 Uppsala, Sweden

Deadline: January 15, 2014

Hosted by the Department of Archival Science, Library & Information Science and Museology & Heritage Studies (ALM), Uppsala University in collaboration with the Faculty of Law, Uppsala University and Linköping University.

The International Society for the History and Theory of Intellectual Property invites to its sixth annual workshop. This time it will be held at Uppsala University and focus on the ways in which intellectual property moves and travels across disciplinary, legal, linguistic, and geopolitical borders. Instability can refer to the way intellectual property law seeks to pin down a legal regime for increasingly unstable works. Instability can refer to the interdisciplinarity of intellectual property scholarship, as it tries to navigate and expand across and beyond disciplinary traditions. Instability can refer to the many processes of cultural and legal translation and transculturation involved in flows of culture.

We encourage a broad variety of historical and/or contemporary topics that explore interdisciplinary and international aspects of intellectual property, engaging with the diversity and plurality of legal and linguistic traditions. We are particularly interested in receiving contributions that deploy a self-reflexive epistemological outlook on the study of intellectual property.

Possible topics include but are not limited to:

- translation and appropriation
- perceptions of instability in different times and places and strategies deployed for dealing with that instability
- transnationalism
- legal borrowing
- comparative legal and cultural studies
- hybridity (in both cultural and legal terms, for instance scientific property)
- processes of commodification and conversion
- the interplay between international, regional and local law/culture
- IP from below
- "centre-periphery" relations
- interchanges, translations and borrowings between various intellectual properties and jurisdictions

Submissions of paper proposals should be made to ishtip2014@gmail.com and include a 300 word abstract, a one paragraph author bio and two page CV.

Please note that after the workshop, presenters will be invited to submit revised papers for publication in a special issue of the peer-reviewed, open access journal Culture Unbound <http://www.cultureunbound.ep.liu.se>

Rethinking EU Immigration: legal developments, management and practices

March 13-14, Bucharest, Romania

Deadline: January 20

Is immigrant integration a key challenge for the EU states? How should governments address the European trends in Migration?

Immigration and integration are of high interest for political actors, academics, researchers and policy makers. With increasing migration to and within an already diverse European Union, the need for understanding and explaining the immigration process is urgent in order to identify the most appropriate integration frameworks. Viewed both as a challenge and as an opportunity, immigration cannot be efficiently managed without coherent integration measures.

We welcome inter-disciplinary approaches to migration dynamics and integration policies and contributions covering research actions, policy analyses, as well as good practice models in migration management.

The discussions may refer but are not limited to the following topics:

- Transnationalism, European identity and integration in Europe;
- Understanding the European integration modules;
- Challenges in measuring immigrant integration;
- Action research on migration;
- Legal perspectives on European immigration;
- The role of migration research centres in migration management;
- Migration and development.

CASCA 2014

Promising Uncertainties: Unsettling the Future of Anthropological Terrain

April 30-May 3, York University, Toronto, Canada

Deadline: February 14

What can uncertainty promise? Documenting indeterminacy, diversity, disunity and contingency is both a political commitment as well an empirical claim.

The 2014 CASCA conference theme seeks to draw out a range of questions including but not limited to: what forms of social and cultural engagements are possible when ambiguity rather than certainty is the central concern of anthropological enquiry and/or ethnographic practice? In what manner and to what extent does uncertainty unsettle neo-liberal processes of classification, transparency and accountability? Does a revolutionizing capitalism's search for new markets foster promise and ambiguity? How does the measurement and management of uncertainty under the monikers of 'risk', 'choice' and 'rights' affect political, social and ethical debates about domains as diverse as immigration, identity politics, technology, art, media, security, health, environment, and the economy? What are the paradoxes that underpin or might emerge out of an anthropological engagement with uncertainty? What might be the intended and unintended outcomes of drawing on this paradigm for anthropology's interlocutors? What forms of ethnographic practice might uncertainty give rise to and/or destabilise?

While CASCA 2014 aims to stimulate discussions and critical reflections on the theme of uncertainty, presentations that fall outside of the proposed theme will also be considered.

The Keynote speaker is Dr. Didier Fassin, the James D. Wolfensohn Professor of Social Science at the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton.

CASCA 2014 invites different types of proposals and strongly encourages panels and symposia that will bring together presenters from a variety of academic and non-academic backgrounds.

In order to submit a paper or propose a panel, symposium, or round-table, you must be a current member of CASCA and register for the 2014 conference (conference registration takes place at the same time as submission).

Lova International Conference 2014

Ethnographies of Gender and the Body

July 9-11, Amsterdam

Deadline: February 15

Lova is proud to announce its third international conference. This year's theme will be on the body and embodiment theory. Corporeal theory deals with affects, emotions, experiences, embodied discourses, physical contact, communication, movements, the control over bodies, bodies as never ending projects, embodied representations, subjectivity and agency, etc., etc. This conference will put the body at the centre stage of feminist anthropology. We invite scholars to present their ethnographic research and case studies and contribute to the empirical, methodological and theoretical development of this exciting field of study.

Ever since Gayle Rubin introduced the sex gender system in 1975, the body has been heavily debated in feminist studies. The sex/gender system suggests a distinction between biology and culture. As it enabled scholars to perceive femininity and masculinity as cultural and social constructs, separated from biology, it meant an important leap in the development of gender studies. But is the body indeed as pre-cultural, pre-social and un-gendered as the distinction suggests? Is the body an unproblematic factual base on which gender is being inscribed? And if we answer the latter question with yes, can the female body then be the argument to somehow reclaim the universality of the category of women? Or are bodies themselves gendered and is the distinction between biology and culture a false one? Rosi Braidotti, Elisabeth Grosz, Judith Butler, Henrietta Moore, Kathy Davis, Anna Aalten and Anne Fausto-Sterling are all feminist scholars who deal with these questions from different disciplinary angles.

Within mainstream humanities, social sciences and anthropology, one can also notice an increasing attention for the body and embodiment theory. The linguistic approaches of discourse and representation that have been so very influential in social theory from the 1970s onwards show a tendency to reduce the body and experience to language, discourse and representation. Sayings such as the “the body as text” and “the inscription of culture on the body” are exemplary. In response to the representation paradigm, critical scholars show a renewed interest in bodily theory.

This conference intends to bring together an international group of feminist scholars and gender experts who share an ethnographic approach and who are inspired by what can be called the corporeal turn in feminist and other social theory. Questions will be discussed such as: What are the newest insights within feminist anthropology on the body? What can feminist ethnography offer to embodied theory? What is the social significance of the female and the male body? What are their implications for human action and society? How are bodies controlled, ordered and lived? In what way do men and women socially and culturally experience their bodies? How is subjectivity embodied. Can we speak from our bodies? And if so, do women speak differently than men? How are bodies' fleshy materiality and the realm of the symbolic interconnected? Is the sex/gender distinction indeed troubling? Can we sever the body from the biological? And, last but not least, can and should we embody gender?

Participation and registration: Lova invites scholars to participate in this international conference by presenting their research in a panel or as an individual paper. We encourage participants to submit audio-visuals and other alternative ways of presenting their research too. We also encourage students (under-graduate and graduate) to present their research. Participants may register by sending panel proposals and individual paper abstracts to lovanetwork@hotmail.com before February 15, 2014. Participants will be informed in due time after having submitted their abstracts whether or not their panels and/or papers have been accepted.

The Determinants of International Migration September 23-25, Wolfson College, University of Oxford Deadline: February 15

What are the different factors that shape migration patterns across the world and how do they interact with each other? How do changing levels of socioeconomic development affect shifting migration practices and directions? Do migration policies have a significant impact on people's migration decisions – or are trade, labour market or welfare policies in origin and destination countries more important? What theoretical approaches can help us to make sense of this complex array of determinants operating across different social, spatial and temporal scales?

The aim of this interdisciplinary conference is to advance evidence-based and theoretical understanding of such determinants of migration processes. While there is a plethora of research on the social, cultural and economic impacts of migration, research on the determinants of migration has remained relatively under-researched and under-theorized. Although there is consensus that various contextual factors in origin and destination countries, policies and social networks all play some role in driving migration, there are conflicting views on their effects, relative importance and interaction.

In the absence of any general theory of migration that can tie together all these different elements, significant progress can be achieved by integrating theoretical insights from different disciplines and fields of empirical research that specialise on particular themes and migrant categories. To advance this agenda, this conference aims to bring together migration scholars to discuss theoretical and empirical avenues for advancing the understanding of the drivers of migration processes. We invite contributions investigating the determinants of migration, and particularly those on:

- The role of development in migration processes
How do economic and demographic transitions, as well as human development in origin and destination countries, affect patterns of immigration and emigration? Is Zelinsky's (1971) model of the 'mobility transition' still useful for explaining contemporary and future migration? How do processes of development and social transformation affect people's aspirations and capabilities and their decisions in terms of whether, when, how, where and for how long to migrate?
- The role of states and policies in migration processes
How do states and their migration and non-migration (e.g., trade, labour market, welfare) policies in origin and destination countries affect the size, timing, duration, direction and composition of international migration? Are borders largely 'beyond control' or are migration policies relatively effective? How large is the effect of policies when taking into account other migration determinants?
- Migration theories
Advancing migration theory is essential in building a shared body of generalised knowledge that can also serve as a guide for further research. How can different theories on the causes of migration be combined? To what extent do their conflicting underlying assumptions present an obstacle to such integration? How can we better connect migration theory to general theories of social change and development?

Crisis, Mobility and New Forms of Migration An international conference to be hosted by the Migration and Integration Research Cluster at the Institute for Social Sciences in the 21st Century (ISS21) September 2-4, University College Cork Deadline: February 21

Since its beginning in 2008, Europe's economic crisis has had a profound impact on societies across Europe and beyond its borders, with significant implications for migration and integration. In October 2010 Angela Merkel announced that attempts to build a multicultural society in Germany had 'utterly failed'. In February 2011 David Cameron declared that state multiculturalism in Britain had failed.

This international conference will explore the multiple ways in which contemporary economic, social and political crises in Europe (and globally) intersect with new and old patterns of migration-related mobility. The role of transnational migration in constructing identities, in cultural representations and the re-drawing of centre and margin in Europe will be central themes. Mobility and immobility provide a valuable lens through which to explore some of the ways in which inequalities and borders are produced, reproduced, experienced and re-created in European and global contexts. Diverse forms of spatial mobility such as short-term and circular migrations, returns and re-migrations, transnational family arrangements and long-distance commuting have become important livelihood strategies for people within and outside Europe in dealing with current economic and political realities. States respond to mobility and crisis through deepening and diversifying mechanisms of regulation and social control of mobility and of migrants. Non-state actors and institutions, such as religious organisations, play an increasingly important role in mediating the migration context. These processes give rise to ongoing questions surrounding contested concepts such as identity, integration, diversity, human rights and equality as they relate to migrants, non-migrants and diasporas. They also provide methodological challenges to researchers seeking to make sense of rapidly changing social, demographic and political realities.

The current economic crisis within Europe has contributed to something of a shift in migration patterns, as many western and southern European states, such as Ireland and Portugal, have re-emerged as sources of labour migration and have become re-imagined as European peripheries. To what extent does this involve a re-drawing of centre and margin in Europe and a re-racialization of Europe's peripheries? Does the concept of 'free internal movement' make sense in understanding the dynamics of crisis outmigration from peripheral Europe? And how does immobility relate to mobility in the context of regulation, social control and crisis? This is also an interesting moment at which to assess Europe's place in a globalized world, the relationship between global centers and peripheries, and how the intersections between crisis, global migration, gender, family and postcolonial ties are being re-shaped. Migration, mobility and immobility are key aspects of Europe's relationships with other global regions and also in the ways in which Europe and its borders are imagined and constructed.

We welcome empirical, theoretical, methodological and policy-focused papers that address these issues, including, but not limited to any of the following themes:

- Economic crisis and affluent mobilities
- New/old mobilities and youth migration to and from European states at a time of austerity
- State and EU responses to and shapings of migrations
- Migrant religions in Europe
- Across the Mediterranean: cultural representations of migration as seen from the South
- Transnational families, children and new mobilities
- Creativity, mobility and transcultural capital

Social Media and the Transformation of Public Space
June 18-20, 2014, University of Amsterdam, Netherlands
Deadline: March 7

The quick rise of social platforms, such as Facebook, Twitter, YouTube and LinkedIn, is fundamentally affecting the balance between personal (private) space, community (public) space, and corporate (commercial) space. These platforms allow, on the one hand, for mass participation in public discourse, providing users with new means of expressions and connection. In this light, it has been argued that social media bring about a democratization of public life: facilitating novel forms of political contestation, more participatory types of journalism, and direct interaction between citizens and political and cultural elites. On the other hand, social media, through their technological architectures, steer how users interact with each other. They penetrate deeply in the dynamics of everyday life, reshaping people's informal personal interactions, but also affecting institutional structures and professional routines. In this process, both public and private communication becomes entangled with social media's commercial mechanisms, transforming the political economy of the media landscape. In combination, these developments force all societal actors, including the mass media, civil society organizations, and state institutions, to reconsider and recalibrate their position in public space.

This conference explores the potentially contradictory cultural and techno-commercial mechanisms introduced by the rise of social media platforms. The organizers invite research from different perspectives and traditions to reflect on this issue. First, we invite work that interrogates how both formal institutions (news, public broadcasting, law and order, etc) and informal organizations (activists, communities) adopt and adjust to social media. What new cultural and political practices are articulated in these processes? Second, we encourage technological perspectives: presentations of scholarship examining which mechanisms of selection and which logics of knowledge production are embedded in the platforms' technologies. Third, the conference solicits economic and political perspectives: how do social media affect the operations and economies of media production? And how do these technologies affect power relations between different social actors?

The main question driving this conference is how social media, looked at from different angles and scholarly approaches, are transforming concepts of public space or "publicness". More particularly, we will ask how social media are involved in the transformation of particular domains, including news production, public broadcasting, activism, and law and order. Examples of possible topics follow below.

Public space

- Social media and new practices of identity and citizenship
- Social platforms and shifting norms and logics of knowledge
- Fluctuating dynamics of public debate
- Redistribution of political, economic, and cultural power through social media

- Twitter as a real-time rating service
- The participation paradigm in television
- PSB 'public' values and the use of social media
- "Social TV": the integration of social media and television.

- Connective processes of mobilization
- Social technologies and changing repertoires of contention
- Viral protest videos

Välkommen till Forte Talks 2014!

25-26 mars 2014, Nacka Strandsmässan, Stockholm

25-26 mars 2014 kommer framstående internationella och svenska forskare och beslutsfattare inom hälsa, arbetsliv och välfärd att presentera och diskutera klyftorna i Sverige. Hur det ser ut i dag och vad väntar oss i framtiden? Och inte minst hur forskningen kan bidra till kloka och välgrundade lösningar.

Hälsa, arbetsliv och välfärd är förknippade med centrala värden i det svenska samhället. Ändå får inte alla lika del av välfärden. Kommer vi att se ökade skillnader mellan olika grupper i samhället? Mellan barn med olika uppväxtvillkor, mellan äldre och yngre, mellan de som är etablerade på arbetsmarknaden och de som står utanför, mellan friska och sjuka, mellan stad och land samt mellan infödda och utlandsfödda svenskar.

Vad beror dessa dramatiska förändringar på? Hänger de samman eller har de oberoende orsaker? Hur ser den globala utvecklingen ut?

Forskningen spelar en viktig roll för att minska de spänningar som kan uppstå, både genom att bidra med kunskap och genom att hitta nya problemformuleringar. För att förändring ska ske är samverkan mellan samhällets olika aktörer avgörande.

Med Forte Talks vill vi skapa en mötesplats för kunskapsutbyte mellan forskare, beslutsfattare, brukare och övriga aktörer som på olika sätt arbetar med eller är intresserade av mänskors hälsa, välfärd och arbetsliv.

IMISCOE 11th Annual Conference

Immigration, Social Cohesion and Social Innovation

August 27-29, Madrid, Spain

Deadline: April 1

The conference is organised by Instituto Universitario de Estudios sobre Migraciones (IEM) at the Universidad Pontificia Comillas in Madrid, Spain.

The IMISCOE Research Network is happy to announce the Eleventh Annual IMISCOE Conference. The event is open to everyone, registered network members and non-members alike.

The 11th IMISCOE Annual Conference will address the links between migration, social cohesion and social innovation in globalised, transnational spaces. Immigrants in Europe have been seriously affected by the economic downturn. Rising unemployment has caused labour and income insecurity and led to long-term vulnerability, particularly for families of immigrant origin. At the same time, public policies aimed at immigrant integration have undergone adjustment and faced budget constraints, and public debates revolving around their redefinition have questioned their effectiveness, management and scope.

The new and more hostile environment has affected not only publicly provided immigrant-targeted services, but has also impacted those supplied by NGOs (devoted to immigrants or not) which had customarily maintained strong financial and institutional links with the State. Together with the economic crisis, the resulting gap in service provision could increase ethnic segmentation processes, ultimately threatening social cohesion. Within this context, social innovation can emerge as a potential solution to the pressing issues immigrants are confronted with.

The 11th IMISCOE Conference welcomes work and participation from scholars of various disciplines, on all aspects of migration, integration and ethnic studies. Submissions directly related to the conference theme are welcome as well as those on other topics in the broad field of migration studies. Both individual papers and panel proposals can be submitted as of mid-January 2014. The conference is open to IMISCOE network members and non-members alike.

The full call for panels and papers will be published mid-January 2014. Panel proposals should consist of 4 or 5 coherent and related papers. Besides research panels, the organisers also invite panel proposals for policy workshops. Submissions can only be done via the online system. The deadline for panel and paper abstracts is 1 April 2014. All submissions must include a short (200 word) panel abstract and an extended abstract (2-4 pages) per paper. Applicants will be informed of the selection decisions by mid-May 2014. Full papers will have to be uploaded to the conference online system no later than 1 August 2014.

The conference will start with a welcome event and keynote address on 27 August followed by two days of plenary sessions, conference panels, PhD training sessions and social events. Confirmed keynotes will be announced soon.

Southern Africa beyond the West:

Political, Economic & Cultural Relationships with the BRICS & the Global South

Journal of Southern African Studies 1st Biennial Conference

August 7-10, 2015, Livingstone, Zambia

Deadline: August 1

The primary aim of the conference will be to consider Southern Africa's place in a future world in which the influence of Western powers is in relative decline. To this end it will focus on social, political and cultural aspects of the region's relationships with other regions, including the Lusophone world, China, India, Russia and their spheres of influence, as well as examples of South-South linkages, recognising at the outset that what are presented as new linkages have a long history.

We will be seeking papers on:

- China's changing role in Southern Africa, inclusive of the historical period of support for liberation movements, economic development assistance and diplomacy, and of the contemporary period related to increased investment and activity, as well as forms of cultural and demographic circulation;
- The Indian Ocean World and Southern Africa, inclusive of Swahili, Arab and Asiatic influences, and Madagascar and India, including shifts in the way India interacted with Africa: first through ancient long distance trade routes, then as a source of migrant labour under British colonialism, then as a non-aligned nation and now as a more contemporary India, which is "competing" with China economically and in other spheres;
- Brazil's relationships with Southern Africa, focusing on its increasing weight in the world economy, including its links with Portugal and the Lusophone African countries, with a Portuguese-centred reconsideration of the Southern African region's pre/colonial history of exploration, missionary activity, trade and colonisation, and decolonisation and war; as well as current religious movements and forms of cultural, economic, political and demographic circulation across the Lusophone world;
- Russia, as the most debatable member of the BRICS, still represents a nation with a long history of interaction with Southern Africa, including support for liberation movements, as well as examples of technical cooperation and demographic circulation and networks still active today;
- South Africa and other emerging southern African economies: Angola, Mozambique, Zambia, Botswana, in addition to regional organisations and corporate linkages, especially South Africa's hegemony over construction and consumer goods in much of the region (think: the ubiquitous South African shopping mall), as well as long-standing white-settler labour issues common throughout the region and further forms of cultural, economic, political and demographic circulation and networks.
