Fundação Getulio Vargas Direito Sao Paulo (Brazil)

FGV DIREITO SP offers innovative, high-quality legal education and prepares professionals to tackle the complex legal demands of contemporary society. The Law School does not follow the traditional model of legal education, in which students are mere spectators passively waiting for information. It adopts a student-centered, skill-developing methodology that transforms pupils into active builders of their own learning. This methodological approach and the innovative techniques it uses - such as simulations and games – develops legal reasoning, critical thinking and a strong grasp of the practical effects of the application of legal knowledge.

University of Lausanne Faculty of Law (Switzerland)

The Law School of the University of Lausanne offers several degree programs including an LL.M. in International Business Law. Taught entirely in English, this Program offers five specializations (International Law & Innovation, International Business Law and Sports, International Business Disputes, International Business Transactions and International Business Regulation) from which students may choose. Students may also opt for a more open course selection without specializing in a particular field. The Program takes an interdisciplinary, comparative and practice-oriented approach to enable young lawyers to face legal challenges in today's global business environment. Offering the highest quality of teaching in small group settings, it is taught by an international team of distinguished academics and practitioners.
