

Students feedback 2022: Why did you choose a summer programme and why SULaw's in particular?

We asked our students why they choose to study our summer programme. Read their earnest answers below.

I chose to participate in the summer program because of the cooperation program between your school and mine. What's more I'm very interested in the courses of your summer program.

Why studying a summer programme? I wanted to improve my English, get a better understanding of international law, and to do something useful in the summer. Why SULaw? because my university advertised it, and both at my home university and internationally SULaw is known for their international law, and I always wanted to visit Sweden.

I stumbled upon it on my university webpage and it seemed like a fun, new, worthwhile experience in which I could learn something new, meet like-minded people and see things from a different perspective.

I believe it would improve my chances of getting hired and I also wanted to test whether my English and law knowledge were sufficient to maybe do my Master abroad.

SULaw had the subjects I considered worthwhile and the length and time period were easily adjustable.

It was one of the few opportunities for me to study law abroad and visit Sweden.

I chose it because it was offered through my home university and I thought the courses looked interesting.

I was interested in learning more about the European view on International Law and I was also interested in discovering a new juridical culture.

I wanted another chance at experiencing life abroad and academics in an entirely different context. Specifically, I chose SULaw's programme because it was an excellent opportunity to travel to a country that I may not have otherwise thought to visit. I also enjoyed the course selection that was available.

I always have a bit more free-time in the summer, but I feel guilty about that. So, the announcement from my own university about SULaw's World Trade Law course came at the right time. I had the capacity to do this course. I hope to be able to include it in my studies at home.

I wanted to meet new people in continental Europe, as I had never previously travelled there. My university was also providing a scholarship for law students to attend, which made the costs more affordable for me since I'm self-funded.

I want my focus in my law degree to be on international law, and my home institution doesn't have a broad offering of international law electives, so when I saw International Criminal Law was on offer I took the chance

I needed ECTS and wanted to experience something new. I chose SULaw because it had a great programme.

I wasn't able to do an exchange due to COVID so this was a perfect way to still study at a foreign university for a little bit.

I chose SULaw because of the subjects, social programme and price.

I chose this programme because it seemed to mix two things: studies, and a better understanding of Swedish culture

I wanted to learn about different jurisdictions and how it feels like studying law in a country which I have not been to before.

I love Sweden

It was a nice opportunity to explore Sweden and learn, from global perspectives.

I wanted to study at another university and experience a different teaching method

I chose the programme to enrich my learning about new topics and gain different perspectives from students from all over the world, and because of the amazing reputation of Stockholm University.

I needed more ECTS for my degree and I only heard good things about Stockholm as a city.

I chose to study a summer programme to acquire the additional credits I needed. I chose Stockholm University as it gave the best choices of classes in my opinion.

I wanted to attend classes in courses I didn't take at my home university.

Because SULaw is one of the leading universities in the field of legal scholarship. I wantd to deepen my knowledge in the chosen fields I opted to attend.

I was particularly interested in arbitration law and my university does not offer it as a topic paper. The opportunity to learn about international commercial arbitration from an expert like Fabricio Fortese and his team of guests is an opportunity that would be otherwise unavailable to me!

I did a summer programme because it meant I could progress more quickly through my degree. I chose SULaw because it was available through my university and the online courses that were offered interested me.

My decision to study the summer program is because of my desire to expand my knowledge and understanding of arbitration. Why I chose SULaw's Summer Programme was because it was a student's exchange programme with my school, so I signed up for it.

I like Stockholm University and Swedish people.

I study Business Law at my home university with a focus on Law & Economics and Tax Law. The offer at SULaw with the subject Law & Economics was a great opportunity to deepen my knowledge in my main subject. After I had already had a very positive experience with the summer school programme at Brusov University in Yerevan last year, I wanted to gain this wonderful experience at Stockholm University. I don't regret a second of it!
